Royal Commission on Auckland Governance
Te Kōwhiriama a te Kaitiaki mō te Mana Whakahaere o Tāmaki-makau-ārua

ROYAL COMMISSION
CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

The Royal Commission on Auckland Governance has been appointed to look into, and report on, local government arrangements for Auckland. The Commission has been asked:

- to examine the present system of local government and how decisions are being made
- to make recommendations about a system of local and regional government that will best suit Auckland for the next 50-100 years
- to ensure Auckland has a system that will take into account Auckland's growth, its ethnic and cultural diversity, its ability to respond to change, and its need to compete internationally.

Submissions sought

The Commission now seeks submissions from the public on local and regional government arrangements for the Auckland region. We want to know whether you are happy with the present form of local government in Auckland. If not, what changes would you like to see?

Call for Submissions document

To help submitters, the Commission has prepared a discussion document named "Call for Submissions". You can read about what the Commission thinks are the key issues and questions which need to be addressed for Auckland's local government.

Copies of the "Call for Submissions" can be obtained from:

- our website at www.royalcommission.govt.nz
- Public Libraries throughout the Auckland region (from Friday 7 March)
- Council offices throughout the Auckland region.

Making Submissions

Any person or organisation may make a written submission. Submission forms are available on our website at www.royalcommission.govt.nz. Forms can be filled in on-line, or printed off and mailed to the Commission. For those people without computers, a detachable form can also be found at the back of the "Call for Submissions" document. All people and organisations making submissions must provide their name and contact details.

Submission Closing Date

Written Submissions must be received by the Royal Commission no later than 4pm on Tuesday 22 April 2008.

Where to Send Submissions

Submissions can be

- filled in on-line at the Commission's website at www.royalcommission.govt.nz, and then sent by clicking "submit"
- written as a Microsoft word document or PDF file, attached to the online form and emailed to the Commission's website
- mailed to the following address (no stamp is required):
FreePost No. 215482
Submissions Administrator
Royal Commission on Auckland Governance
Private Bag 92049
Auckland Mail Centre
Auckland 1142

Process for dealing with Submissions

Submissions will be publicly available on the Commission's website as soon as practicable after submissions close on 22 April 2008. The names of submitters will be on the website, but addresses and other contact details will not.

Hearings

Please tell us if you wish to speak in support of your written submission.

The Commission will be conducting public hearings throughout the Auckland region. Details of times and places for hearings will be posted on the Commission's website. It is expected these will be held in the first three weeks of May and in June. People who make written submissions will be advised in advance of hearing dates.

Appendix B: Main Text of Call for Submissions Document

The following text is the main information supplied in the Call for Submissions document, which was published in March 2008 and widely distributed throughout the Auckland region. (Note that the appended text does not include the appendices mentioned.)

Part One: Introduction

1. The Royal Commission on Auckland Governance (the “Commission”) has been appointed to receive representations on, inquire into, investigate, and report on
 - the local government arrangements (including institutions, mechanisms, and processes) that are required in the Auckland region over the foreseeable future in order to maximise, in a cost effective manner,—
 - (a) the current and future well-being of the region and its communities; and
 - (b) the region’s contribution to wider national objectives and outcomes.
2. The Commission’s full terms of reference are attached as Appendix 1 to this document. They are also available on the Commission’s website (www.royalcommission.govt.nz).
3. In this document, we will be talking about decision making at two levels:
 - decision making at a regional level, relating to the whole of the Auckland region. Decisions at this level are currently made by the Auckland Regional Council (“ARC”).
 - decision making at a local level. Decisions at this level are currently made by the four city councils and three district councils (we refer to these as “local councils”), and in some cases by community boards.
4. We also refer to governance. The United Nations has defined this term as the processes for making decisions and implementing them.
5. Auckland’s prosperity and well-being are essential to New Zealand’s prosperity and well-being. Over the next 50 years and beyond, the Auckland region will face enormous change and pressures. To meet these challenges, and to realise its potential as a world-class city, Auckland needs world-class local and regional governance.
6. The Auckland region stretches from Wellsford in the north to just north of the Waikato River in the south, and from the west coast beaches of the Tasman Sea to the Pacific coastline of the Hauraki Gulf in the east. The 2006 census recorded the population of the Auckland region as being 1,319,400. The population is expected to reach 2 million by 2050.
7. Auckland is the most ethnically diverse region in New Zealand, with 56.5% of its population recorded as European in the 2006 census, 18.9% as Asian, 14.4% as Pacific peoples, and 11.1% as Māori. The distribution of these major ethnic groups varies across the region.

8. The Auckland region's current governance arrangements are complex. Central government, the ARC, seven local councils, 30 community boards, and a number of public and non-public agencies together make planning decisions and provide infrastructure and services for the region. Appendix 2 sets out the details of the current governance structure.

9. For the year ending June 2007, the total operating expenditure by Auckland councils was approximately $1.7 billion.

10. The Auckland region has a number of important decisions to make in the near future, including the extent of metropolitan urban limits, and infrastructure decisions relating to road, rail, and public transport such as a possible second harbour crossing. The purpose of this inquiry is not to look at what spending or other specific decisions should or should not be made. Our concern is what decision-making structures and processes are likely to lead to good and timely decisions and whether that requires changes to be made to the existing structures and processes.

11. The Commission will consider whether existing governance structures provide for decisions of regional significance to be made and implemented in the most effective way. It will also consider the interrelationship between the ARC and local councils and community boards, and whether these or other mechanisms will best be able to give effect to the objective in the Local Government Act 2002 of enabling democratic local decision making and action by, and on behalf of, communities. Which decisions should be made at the regional and local levels respectively is an issue central to the Commission's work.

12. The Commission is an independent and politically neutral body. It has no preconceived views on these issues and will give thorough consideration to all points of view. It will review existing information, undertake additional investigations, obtain expert advice as needed, and consult widely through public submissions and meetings.

13. Part Two sets out issues that the Commission considers as central to its inquiry, and poses a number of questions which the public are invited to consider.

14. Part Three of this document describes the Commission's consultation process, and how to make a written submission.

15. The Commission's terms of reference require it to consult in a way that allows people to express clearly their views. Special provision is made for consultation with Māori. In that respect, the terms of reference require the Commission "to consult and engage with Māori in a manner that specifically provides for their needs". The Commission is developing specific procedures to meet this obligation.

Part Two: Major Issues

16. At the heart of the Commission's work is finding out how best local government can be shaped to promote the well-being of the region and its diverse communities, and to assist in building a world-class city.

17. As noted in our Open Letter to the People of Auckland at the beginning of this document, the Commission's task could be summed up in the following two questions:

- Are you happy with the form of local government in Auckland?
- If not, what changes would you like to see?

18. Even if you haven't the time or don't wish to answer the more detailed questions set out below, we would appreciate your answers to these two questions. We have designed our submission form so you can do this.

19. For those who wish to comment in more detail, the Commission seeks feedback from the public on the following issues:

- (1) What kind of local government arrangements will help Auckland become a successful world-class city?
- (2) What decisions should be made and implemented at a regional level? By what body or bodies or processes should these decisions be made?
- (3) What decisions should be made and implemented at a local level? By what body or bodies or processes should these decisions be made?
- (4) To what extent should individual local councils follow consistent practices? How do we ensure that decisions made at national, regional, and local government levels are consistent with each other, and that they lead in the same direction?
- (5) How do we ensure that whatever form of local government is adopted remains properly accountable to the people of Auckland?

20. We offer below some preliminary comments on these issues, and pose a number of supplementary questions. The key issues and questions identified by the Commission in this document are not exhaustive. They are intended to stimulate rather than limit discussion. Other issues and lines of inquiry may arise in the course of the Commission's work. Submitters can comment on any matters relevant to the terms of reference that are not covered under the five issues we have identified.

21. Some people may have views on the existing funding system for local government and how this impacts on the ability of councils to govern effectively. While this is relevant to the Commission's terms of reference, the Commission is also required to have regard to the findings of the 2007 Commission of Inquiry into Local Government Rates. Therefore, it does not propose to address this matter in detail but to rely largely on the conclusions of that Inquiry.

Overview

Issue 1: What kind of local government arrangements will help Auckland become a successful world-class city?

22. A world-class city is one where people want to live and do business, one that is attractive to people and capital from overseas, that has a strong cultural and artistic identity, and where creativity is reflected in a strong research and innovation culture. To support this we need, among other things, to provide a positive regulatory and business environment, as well as good infrastructure, and to manage our environment carefully.

23. The starting point for considering how local government should function in the Auckland region is the purpose and principles of local government stated in the Local Government Act 2002 (the “Act”). Sections 10–14 of the Act are set out in full in Appendix 3. The Commission’s terms of reference exclude inquiry into these statutory provisions.

24. Section 10 of the Act states that the purpose of local government is

- (a) to enable democratic local decision-making and action by, and on behalf of, communities; and
- (b) to promote the social, economic, environmental, and cultural well-being of communities, in the present and for the future.

25. Section 11 of the Act says that the role of a local authority is to

- (a) give effect, in relation to its district or region, to the purpose of local government stated in section 10; and
- (b) perform the duties, and exercise the rights, conferred on it by or under this Act and any other enactment.

26. The Act does not set out the specific functions or activities of local and regional councils, but, as shown in section 11, provides them with a power of general competence to pursue well-being for their communities in ways they see fit. It is clear from section 10 of the Act that the responsibilities of local government can go well beyond the provision of infrastructure and related service delivery and encompass everything from pensioner housing to education to economic development – anything that concerns the social and economic health of communities.

27. The structure of local government as provided for in the Act applies across New Zealand and is not specifically tailored for Auckland. Under its terms of reference the Commission may propose structures different from those that are provided for in the Act – as long as the arrangements are consistent with the purpose and principles of the Act. This means the Commission is not limited by the current structures of regional councils, city and district councils, and community boards, and is able to propose new structures.

28. The Commission considers that some of the needed characteristics of local government to support the development of a successful and sustainable city/region are as follows:

(a) transparency

The responsibility for decision making and the consequent responsibilities for delivery and funding should be clear to the general public.

(b) accountability

The local government arrangements should provide for clear accountability for achieving outcomes, use of public funds, and stewardship of public assets.

(c) efficient resource use

The supply of local government services should be timely and cost-efficient, supporting delivery of the right quality and quantity of services to local residents and businesses without undue wastage, at reasonable cost.

(d) responsiveness.

Local government should be proactive in identifying and responding to the current and future needs of its communities and should have the strength and flexibility to cope with uncertainty, complexity, and change.

29. A lot of work has been done already on how Auckland's governance structures might be changed. Regional and local government, and various groups and individuals, have proposed a range of different models. At one end of the spectrum, Auckland could have one "super council" controlling all regional and local issues. At the other end we could go back to the system where there were a larger number of smaller local councils. In between these extremes lie any number of positions, including the status quo.

30. Councils in Auckland agree that current local government arrangements are impeding the development of Auckland as a world-class city, in particular because of fragmented responsibility for the decision making and funding. However, they differ in their suggested remedies.

Questions

- Q1 Do you agree or disagree with our list (in paragraph 28) of what local government arrangements should ideally provide?
- Q2 Do you think there are other criteria that are as important and should be included?
- Q3 What overall structure of local government do you think is appropriate for the Auckland region, and why?

Regional decision making

Issue 2: What decisions should be made and implemented at a regional level? By what body or bodies or processes should these decisions be made?

31. The terms of reference invite the Commission to consider ownership, governance, and institutional arrangements and funding responsibilities that will support and enhance “the ability of the Auckland region to respond to economic, environmental, cultural, and social challenges (for example, climate change)”.

32. Clear identification is required of the matters that are best managed and decided regionally and those that are best managed and decided locally. This involves an assessment of

- whether particular issues and services have predominantly regional or predominantly local impacts
- whether there are savings and efficiencies to be made by a service being delivered by a larger organisation
- whether an issue or service provided is relevant to people throughout the region, or is relevant to, or applies only to, people in specific communities
- whether consistency in the way in which an issue is treated or a service provided is more important than having diverse approaches tailored to specific communities.

33. It is helpful to think about what sort of decisions and activities at a practical level might be considered to be of a primarily regional character, and appropriately made and managed at a regional level. There seems to be substantial agreement that major parks and reserves and public transport should be managed on a regional basis. However, there are greater differences of opinion about the planning and management of the “three waters” (water supply, wastewater, and stormwater); roading infrastructure; economic development; environmental protection; urban growth management; and major cultural, sporting, and recreational facilities. In some instances, there may be no clearly desirable line of demarcation, so that the debate is about the sharing of responsibilities rather than allocating them to one body or another.

34. A further consideration is whether consolidating decision making in one body, such as a super-city, is necessarily the best solution for improved efficiency of infrastructure provision and service delivery, and whether it is compatible with other objectives such as accountability.

35. Currently, the Auckland region is a mix of predominantly rural councils (Rodney District and Franklin District) and predominantly urban city councils. If the region covered just urban and future urban areas, would this enable more effective governance structures? Would the rural parts of Rodney, Franklin, and Manukau be better served by being part of a different regional council? (Franklin District, for example, is currently split between two regional councils, Auckland and Waikato.)

36. At the moment, the mayors of the city and district councils are elected directly. The chair of the ARC is elected by fellow members of the ARC. In some cities, for example London, directly elected mayors may have executive powers, exercised independently of their councils. Some have expressed the view that, in future, the chair or mayor of any Auckland regional governance body should be directly elected or appointed and have significant executive powers in order to exercise regional leadership.

Questions

- Q4 What decisions and activities should be made and undertaken at a regional level, and why?
- Q5 What sort of body or bodies should be responsible for regional decision making? One or more? What should that body or bodies be responsible for? To whom should it or they be answerable?
- Q6 Should the Auckland region retain its current boundaries or should they be altered?
- Q7 Should the chair or mayor of a regional governance body be directly elected?
- Q8 Should such a chair or mayor have executive powers to make decisions for the region independently of the council?

Local and community decision making

Issue 3: What decisions should be made and implemented at a local level? By what body or bodies or processes should these decisions be made?

37. There appears to be renewed emphasis on the role of local government as an instrument for making local choices to suit local needs, with local democracy being seen by some as a core role of local government. But people have different understandings about what local decision making is and should be. Currently local decision making takes place at city and district council and community board levels. These entities are seen by some to provide a valuable role in facilitating local democracy and diversity and helping to address emerging local social or environmental problems.

38. At the moment, there are seven local councils in the Auckland region, five of which have community boards (the number of which is set out in brackets):

Rodney District (0)

North Shore City (6)

Waitakere City (4)

Auckland City (10)

Manukau City (8)

Papakura District (0)

Franklin District (2).

39. Ensuring that an appropriate level of local democracy is maintained, whilst enabling regional coordination and focus, is a delicate balance to strike. It requires adequate mechanisms to address and provide for community issues, combined with a system that (working with central government) can achieve regional objectives. Consideration must be given to enabling citizens to have their say while providing elected representatives with the capacity to exercise leadership.

40. The Commission needs to consider what decisions are best made and services provided at a local level. Following on from this, thought must be given to the best form, size, and responsibilities of local and community authorities. While units of local government need to be of a sufficient size to deliver services and achieve efficiency, they also need to be small enough to be accessible, accountable, and responsive to local and community needs.

Questions

- Q9 What decisions and activities should be made and undertaken at a local level, and why?
- Q10 What kind of local body entity (for example, city or district councils, community boards, or something else) would be best to make these local decisions?
- Q11 Is your local council large enough to deliver services efficiently but small enough to be accessible and accountable? If the answer is no, what do you think is the appropriate size for your local council?
- Q12 Do you think your local council is making good decisions for your area?
- Q13 Do you have a view on the number of councillors on district or city councils?
- Q14 Do you think community boards serve a useful function? If not, how could they be improved?
- Q15 Do you have a view as to whether current local body structures should be changed either to reduce or increase the number of bodies?
- Q16 Do you have any views on the current boundaries of district or city councils in the Auckland region?

Coordination within the region

Issue 4: To what extent should individual local councils follow consistent practices? How do we ensure that decisions made at national, regional, and local government levels are consistent with each other, and that they lead in the same direction?

41. The Local Government Act 2002 gives councils considerable discretion in what they do as long as they go through the appropriate consultation and decision-making procedures. Local councils also have considerable discretion in the way they deliver services and apply regulations (such as planning rules or by-laws) within their territories. Such differences may reflect different local needs. But they may also lead to unnecessary confusion and costs.

42. There may be different ways of aligning council practices across boundaries. Councils can cooperate on specific matters, by consulting about their infrastructure spending, by sharing services, and even by holding common ownership in community-controlled organisations, for example. They can even amalgamate some or all of their activities.

43. Auckland has had long experience of cooperation between regional and local councils. For example, the Auckland Regional Growth Forum, formed in 1996, shows how the regional and local councils can cooperate, in that case to prepare plans for Auckland's growth. This cooperation is continuing in the development of the current "One Plan" for Auckland. However, central government found it necessary to amend the Local Government Act in 2004 to ensure that local councils reflect the land use principles of the ARC's "Regional Policy Statement" and to enforce integrated land use and transport planning. Overall, it appears that cooperation is better at the planning level and may need improvement at the implementation level.

44. Many of the decisions that impact upon our communities are made at the national level. Sometimes regional and local councils may have involvement in the same areas. This necessitates effective collaboration between these three levels of government. The various levels of government need to talk to each other. They need to know what the others are doing, and to coordinate their activities. A good example is roading.

45. There is already considerable cooperation and coordination between central and local government. Central government has created an office in Auckland (the Government Urban and Economic Development Office) to improve coordination between central government agencies' operations in Auckland and the ARC and local councils.

Questions

Q17 To what extent is it reasonable to have regulations and processes differing between local councils (for example, those covering building consents and other planning issues)? If this is a problem, how is it best overcome?

Q18 How adequate is coordination between central government and the Auckland councils? What improvements, if any, are needed?

Accountability

Issue 5: How do we ensure that whatever form of local government is adopted remains properly accountable to the people of Auckland?

46. The terms of reference say that the Commission may consider

- (e) what governance and representation arrangements will best—

- (i) enable effective responses to the different communities of interest and reflect and nurture the cultural diversity within the Auckland region; and
- (ii) provide leadership for the Auckland region and its communities, while facilitating appropriate participation by citizens and other groups and stakeholders in decision-making processes.

47. At the heart of good governance is balancing the ability of the people of Auckland to have their say, on one hand, with the need to allow elected representatives to exercise leadership, and to get on with the job.

48. The primary mechanism for ensuring councils in the region are accountable is the ability of Aucklanders to vote local and regional councillors on and off councils once every three years.

49. Citizens also have the opportunity to exercise a voice through council-initiated consultation processes, including in relation to their plans (for example, long-term council community plans and district plans), resource consent applications, and particular issues. Consultation adds to the opportunity for input by interested parties and by the public at large, although there is debate about how much it costs and how far it improves the quality of decision making. Some members of the community feel put upon by too much consultation and surveying by councils. The Commission is interested in whether current governance arrangements in Auckland provide sufficient or more than sufficient consultation.

50. The accountability of councils to constituents can be achieved by a variety of means. It need not be limited simply to the right to vote representatives on and off the council. A more collaborative approach can be developed, for example, by use of surveys and formal consultation; citizens' panels, submissions, and hearings; and lobbying and petitions. Too much of this activity could prevent councils from focusing on their main activities, and prevent them from advancing their citizens' main goals. Councils need to identify the key issues on which they might engage with their constituents. For example, these might be limited to very local decisions and activities, or to issues with far-reaching consequences for a large number of people. Collaboration may also be influenced by the size and structure of councils.

51. It is necessary also to consider whether there are some functions of local government where direct participation by citizens in decision making is less important than others. Some services are mainly technical in nature, and may be accepted as a given by residents as long as they are functioning effectively and priced fairly. These might include service delivery functions such as water supply, wastewater, major reserves, and roading, where it may be sufficient for the public to be informed of what is going on, without the need for extensive consultation.

52. Councils also have the ability to create council-controlled organisations to provide infrastructure and service delivery. These have a charter and goals established for them by their parent council, but operate at arm's length. They have a separate management board drawn so as to bring particular outside expertise to their decision making.

Questions

Q19 Are there functions of Auckland local government where participation by the public in decision making is less important? If so, what areas, for example, water supply, waste water, major reserves, transport? In what areas is participation most important?

Q20 Are you concerned about the costs and time taken in consultation by councils? Do you think it is justified by better decisions?

Q21 Are there other forms of citizen involvement in council decision making that could be used?

Q22 Should local bodies be composed of elected members only? Should there be provision for appointment of expert members?

Q23 Do you wish to express a view on whether council-controlled organisations are adequately accountable?

Part Three: Consultation and Submission Process

Consultation process

53. The Commission is now seeking written submissions, and will be convening public hearings and consulting with councils, specific interest groups, and Māori, Pacific peoples, and other ethnic communities.

54. The Commission intends to consult as broadly as it can. Written submissions are an important part of this process.

Written submissions

55. Written submissions will be accepted until 4 p.m. on 22 April 2008. Submitters are asked to send their submissions via the Royal Commission's website (www.royalcommission.govt.nz) if possible. There are two ways you can make submissions via the website:

- Simply complete the submission form online and click "submit".
- Attach your submission in a separate, electronic file (in Microsoft Word or PDF format) to the online submission form.

56. Submission forms may also be completed by hand and mailed to the Commission. The submission form can be printed from the Commission website. A detachable form can also be found at the end of this document.

57. Mailed submissions should be sent to the following FreePost address (no stamp is required), to be received no later than 22 April 2008:

FreePost No. 215482
Submissions Administrator
Royal Commission on Auckland Governance
Private Bag 92049
Auckland Mail Centre
Auckland 1142

58. Six copies should be provided for mailed submissions over 10 pages in length.

59. Submissions do not have to be completed in the form suggested but all submitters (whether or not they opt to use the form provided) should provide the name of the individual or organisation lodging the submission, and their contact details.

60. Submitters are not limited to addressing only the questions set out in the submission form and discussed in Part Two of this paper. However, submissions should be relevant to the terms of reference.

61. All submitters using the long response form provided or making submissions longer than two pages are asked to include a summary of their key points.

Content of written and oral submissions

62. The Commission's mandate is future-focused. It is not within the scope of the Commission's terms of reference to seek to resolve current regional or local issues such as whether there should be a further harbour crossing, whether the metropolitan urban limits should be extended, or what decisions should be made relating to road, rail, and public transport. The Commission's interest is in decision-making structures and processes. Although current and past experience may be relevant in identifying or analysing structural issues to be addressed, detailed comment about past events and specific projects will not assist the Commission unless the relationship with governance structures is made clear.

63. Although the Commission is open to hearing opinions, it wishes to hear the facts that back up those opinions. Because the Commission is required to develop recommendations for future local government arrangements, we encourage submissions to be constructive, offering solutions, not just identifying problems.

Written submissions publicly available

64. The Commission wishes to foster an open and informed discussion of the issues. Accordingly, it is intended that all submissions will be made available on the Commission's website as soon as practicable after submissions close. The names of submitters will be on the website, but addresses and other contact details will not be published online.

65. If it is desired that any material provided to the Commission not be made public, this material should be clearly identified and the grounds for withholding it specified.

Hearings

66. The Commission's intention is to hold public hearings throughout the Auckland region so that the Commission's meetings will be easily accessible to the Auckland community. To help the Commission organise hearings, those making written submissions are asked to indicate whether they wish to be heard in support of their submission. If so, submitters are asked to indicate the locality in which they wish to be heard (Rodney, North Shore, Waitakere, Auckland, Manukau, Papakura, or Franklin).

67. We wish to emphasise that if you have made a written submission you do not have to speak in support of it. All submissions will be read. We will almost certainly have to place a time limit on oral submissions to ensure that everyone who wants to be heard gets the opportunity, and so that we can complete our inquiry in time to report by 1 December 2008.

Appendices

68. Details of times and places for hearings will be available on the Commission's website. Those who make written submissions will be personally advised of these at least five working days in advance of the hearing that they are invited to attend.

69. It is anticipated that hearings will be convened in the first three weeks of May and in June.

Glossary of terms relating to local government
Annual plan	An annual plan must be prepared by a council annually, and it must be adopted before the commencement of the year in which it operates. It contains the budgets on which rates are decided for each financial year. The purpose of the annual plan is set out in the Local Government Act 2002, section 95(5). [See also long-term council community plan (LTCCP).]
Annual report	An annual report must be prepared annually for each financial year. The purpose of the annual report is to compare activities performed with those intended in the annual plan. The annual report is described in the Local Government Act 2002, section 98.
Annual value	The annual value is one basis on which local authorities can set rates. It is a measure of what a property would fetch if rented on the open market.
Auckland Regional Transport Authority (ARTA)	ARTA was established under the Local Government (Auckland) Amendment Act 2004. It manages public transport contracts.
Borough	An administrative division of a city/region. Boroughs were abolished in 1989 when local government was restructured. There have been some calls for a restoration of borough councils, for instance in Devonport.
Brownfield	An industrial site, often considered for further industrial, commercial, or urban development.
Call for Submissions	A booklet published by the Royal Commission on Auckland Governance calling for public submissions (March 2008).
Capital value	This is defined by the Rating Valuations Act 1998 as, “subject to sections 20 and 21, the sum that the owner’s estate or interest in the land, if unencumbered by any mortgage or other charge, might be expected to realise at the time of valuation if offered for sale on such reasonable terms and conditions as a bona fide seller might be expected to require”. Capital value does not include chattels, stock, plant, or machinery that may normally be included in the sales of properties.
Central government	Central government is the national government of New Zealand. It includes elected members of Parliament, the sitting government, parliamentary support agencies, and the public service. Visit www.ssc.govt.nz for more information on the public service.
Committee (of a council)	A council may appoint a committee to work in a certain area of responsibility where the local authority operates. A committee is a working group that usually has fewer members than the full council.

Community (of interest) A network of people and organisations linked together by common factors. This might be a network of people linked together geographically (i.e. in one place) or linked by a common interest or identity.

Community board Community boards are established under section 49 of the Local Government Act 2002. Community boards usually consist of five or six members, elected at the time of council elections. For each community board there is a defined “community”, which in Auckland often encompasses a group of adjoining suburbs. Section 52 of the Local Government Act 2002 specifies the role of the community boards is to

- (a) represent, and act as an advocate for, the interests of its community; and
- (b) consider and report on all matters referred to it by the territorial authority, or any matter of interest or concern to the community board; and
- (c) maintain an overview of the services provided by the territorial authority within the community; and
- (d) prepare an annual submission to the territorial authority for expenditure within the community; and
- (e) communicate with community organisations and special interest groups within the community; and
- (f) undertake any other responsibilities that are delegated to it by the territorial authority.

Also, according to Schedule 7 clause 32(6) a council must consider whether or not to delegate to a community board if the delegation would enable the community board to best achieve its role.

Community outcome A desired state of affairs that the community has identified through a process. These outcomes are intended to inform the development of local authority planning, and coordinate the activities and planning of all sectors of the community.

Council organisation Any organisation in which one or more local authorities owns or controls any portion of the voting rights, or has the right to appoint one or more of the directors, trustees, etc.

Council-controlled organisation (CCO) Any organisation in which one or more local authorities owns or controls 50% or more of the voting rights or has the right to appoint 50% or more of the directors, trustees etc. The principal objective of a CCO according to section 59 of the Local Government Act 2002 is to

- (a) achieve the objectives of its shareholders, both commercial and non-commercial, as specified in the statement of intent; and
- (b) be a good employer; and

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> (c) exhibit a sense of social and environmental responsibility by having regard to the interests of the community in which it operates and by endeavouring to accommodate or encourage these when able to do so; and (d) if the council-controlled organisation is a council-controlled trading organisation, conduct its affairs in accordance with sound business practice.
Council-controlled trading organisation	Council-controlled trading organisations are council-controlled organisations that operate a trading undertaking for the purpose of making a profit.
First past the post (FPP)	Under FPP the voter places a tick next to the names of the candidates they wish to vote for. The voter can vote for as many candidates as there are positions available to be filled. The candidates with the most votes win.
Governance	The act, process, or power of governing. As this term is currently being used in New Zealand, it refers to the means for collective action in society, responding to and guiding change that is beyond the capacity of private action.
Greenfield	A piece of usually rural or semi-rural undeveloped land, often considered as a site for expanding urban development.
Hauraki Gulf islands	The main islands referred to as the Hauraki Gulf islands, or Gulf islands, include Waiheke Island, Great Barrier Island, Pakatoa Island, Rangitoto Island, Ponui Island, Motuihe Island, Motutapu Island, Rakino Island, and Brown’s Island. There are more than 65 islands overall.
Joint committee	Councils may form a joint committee to work together on certain issues.
Land value	This is defined by the Rating Valuations Act 1998: Land value, in relation to any land, and subject to sections 20 and 21, means the sum that the owner’s estate or interest in the land, if unencumbered by any mortgage or other charge, might be expected to realise at the time of valuation if,— <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (a) Offered for sale on such reasonable terms and conditions as a bona fide seller might be expected to impose; and (b) No improvements have been made on the land.
Local authority	A local authority means a regional council or territorial authority, according to the Local Government Act 2002.
Local council	A vernacular, rather than legal, term to distinguish a territorial authority from the regional council. A local council can be a city or district council, responsible for the government of a specific area in a region. Councils are funded mainly through rates, charges to local home-owners and businesses. Councils provide a range of infrastructural and community services, such as drainage, water and electricity supply, local roads and footpaths, refuse collection and disposal, cultural facilities and halls, libraries, and local parks. There is a wide variation in the range of services and programmes councils provide and fund.

Local government	Local government refers to the government structures overseeing a particular locality, region, city, or district, such as a regional council, city or district council, or a community board.
Long-term council community plan (LTCCP)	This is a document, required under the Local Government Act 2002, to be in place at all times, setting out a local authority's priorities and financial budgets in the medium to long term.
Place-shaping	The creative use of powers and influence to promote the general well-being of a community and its citizens.
Potable water	Water safe or suitable for drinking.
Purpose of local government	This is defined in the Local Government Act 2002 section 10: The purpose of local government is— (a) to enable democratic decision-making and action by, and on behalf of, communities; and (b) to promote the social, economic, environmental, and cultural well-being of communities, in the present and in the future.
Regional council	A regional council is one type of local authority. Regional councils' responsibilities include <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • sustainable regional well-being • managing the effects of using freshwater, land, air, and coastal waters • developing regional policy statements and the issuing of consents • managing rivers, mitigating soil erosion, and flood control • regional emergency management and civil defence preparedness • regional land transport planning and contracting passenger services • harbour navigation and safety, oil spills, and other marine pollution. Some district and city councils also have the powers of regional councils; these are referred to as unitary authorities.
Regional land transport programme (RLTP)	Regional land transport programmes are the three-yearly land transport infrastructure and services proposals for funding from the National Land Transport Fund prepared by regional transport committees. In the case of Auckland, the regional land transport programme is prepared by ARTA.

Regional land transport strategy (RLTS)	Under the Land Transport Management Amendment Act 2008, every regional transport committee on behalf of the regional council must prepare, and consult on, a regional land transport strategy to provide guidance on the land transport outcomes sought by the region. The RLTS must be produced every six years and cover a period of 30 years, and it must contribute to the vision set out in the strategy.
Regional transport committee	Every regional council or unitary authority must establish a transport committee for its region and appoint a range of representatives (including those from the regional council, territorial authorities, the New Zealand Transport Agency, one representing each of the five transport objectives, and one from a cultural perspective). The main functions of the regional transport committee are to prepare a regional land transport strategy and a regional land transport programme.
Single transferable voting (STV)	Under STV voters rank candidates in their order of preference using numbers. A voter would write “1” next to the name of their favourite candidate, “2” next to their second favourite candidate, and so on. Voters may give preferences to as few or many candidates as they wish.
Standing committee	A standing committee is a permanent committee of a council.
Strategic asset	An asset or group of assets that the local authority needs to retain to maintain its capacity to promote any outcome it considers important to the current or future well-being of the community.
State highway	A State highway is a road operated by the New Zealand Transport Agency, formerly operated by Transit New Zealand.
Subsidiarity	Subsidiarity is an organising principle that matters ought to be handled by the smallest, lowest, or least centralised competent authority. The New Zealand Oxford Dictionary defines subsidiarity as “the principle that a central authority should have a subsidiary function, performing only those tasks which cannot be performed effectively at a more local level”. In local government terms, it means the devolvement of responsibility to the unit of government closest to the community.
Sustainable well-being	The term sustainable well-being is based in the concept of the secure existence of individuals, communities, and society generally with a sustainable economy and a healthy ecosystem. Taken from Terrence Loomis, A Framework for Developing Sustainable Communities , Wellington, Department of Internal Affairs, 2002, p. 5.
Territorial authority (TA) (sometimes referred to as territorial local authorities (TLAs))	This is the legal name for city or district councils. Territorial

	authorities' responsibilities include sustainable district well-being, the provision of local infrastructure, including water, sewerage, storm water, roads, environmental safety and health, district emergency management and civil defence preparedness, building control, public health inspections and other environmental health matters, controlling the effects of land use (including hazardous substances, natural hazards, and indigenous biodiversity), noise, and the effects of activities on the surface of lakes and rivers.
Three waters	The three waters refers to wastewater (including sewage), stormwater, and drinking water. The supply and drainage pipes, and treatment/sanitisation for the three waters are commonly regarded as infrastructural responsibilities of councils. In Auckland, it is a shared responsibility of Watercare Services Ltd and councils.
Unitary authority	A unitary authority is a territorial authority that has the responsibilities, duties, and powers of a regional council conferred on it, either by the provisions of any Act, or by an Order in Council giving effect to a reorganisation scheme.
Ward	An electorate or sector of a city or district that is represented by a councillor. For instance, Auckland City was divided into 10 wards at the 1989 restructuring; these have since been combined into seven wards, represented by 18 councillors. (The seven wards are Avondale-Roskill, Eastern Bays, Eden-Albert, Hobson, Tamaki-Maungakiekie, Western Bays, and the Hauraki Gulf Islands.) Each ward has a community board consisting of its elected councillor, and six other representative residents. The regional council is similarly divided into "constituencies" for electoral purposes.
Wastewater	Water containing waste including greywater (wastewater from showers, baths, and sinks that are not used for disposal of waste), blackwater (wastewater from toilet flushing or from sinks used for disposal of waste such as food), or water contaminated by waste contact, including process-generated and contaminated rainfall runoff.
Well-being	The Local Government Act 2002 states one of the purposes of local government is to promote the well-being of the communities it governs. It mentions four dimensions of well-being: social, economic, environmental, and cultural well-being. (See Purpose of local government.)
