She is my Son: The Adrienne Clarke Story by Beverly Holland

Told with compassion & understanding by a New Zealand mother who came to terms with the fact that her son was "different." An account of how her son- who had an identity crisis from early childhood- finally underwent a successful sex-change operation and was transformed from an eye-catching transsexual to a truly beautiful woman.

The Woman I Was Not Born To Be: A Transsexual Journey by Aleshia Brevard

Best known for her roles in B movies (one of her more memorable was as a Pussycat in Don Knotts's The Love God) and her work as a drag-show entertainer, Brevard (born Alfred Crenshaw) never felt at home in her body. In her autobiography, she relates the story of her remarkable life in sometimes funny, sometimes painful detail, from her gender-reassignment surgery and its aftermath to her stereotypically feminine employment (she was a Playboy Bunny for a time) and her three unhappy marriages.

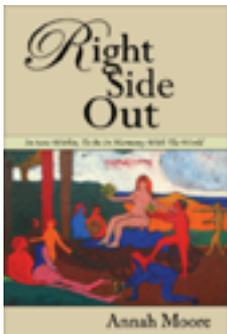

The Danish Girl by David Ebershoff

Though the title character of David Ebershoff's debut novel is a transsexual, the book is less concerned with transgender issues than the mysterious and ineffable nature of love. Loosely based on the life of Danish painter Einar Wegener who, in 1931, became the first man to undergo a sex-change operation, The Danish Girl borrows the bare bones of his story as a jumping-off point for an exploration of how Wegener's decisions affected the people around him.

A Personal Autobiography by Christine Jorgensen

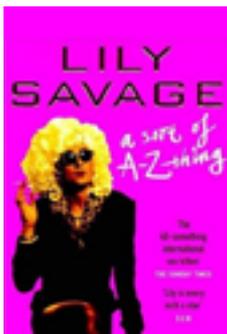

Jorgensen made international headlines in the early 1950s as the first person to go public about having a sex-change operation. Following the revelation, s/he became the poster child for transsexualism. Her 1967 autobiography is a straightforward account of growing up as a boy with much inner conflict. It goes on to cover the decision to have the surgery, the procedure itself, and her successful career as a Las Vegas entertainer.

Right Side Out: In-tune Within, To be in Harmony With the World

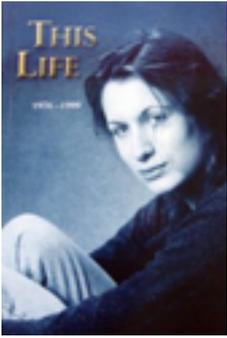

by Annah Moore

Far more than a transsexual memoir, this book is a plunge into the core of what makes a person who they are- a journey into the brightest and darkest recesses of humanity and back through author Annah Moore's unique and deeply passionate struggle for survival in a quest to find her true self. Through candid vignettes and vivid recollections, Moore shares with us some of the all-time lows and highs on her journey through life. Not only does Moore give you entertaining and thought-provoking glimpses into her experiences, she takes you one step further and explains exactly how each of these incredible events helped transform not only her outer self, but her entire being. This overall change embodies the most powerful part of her story, for it is not just a tale about outer transformation- it is a complete alteration of mind, body, and spirit.
